Conditions.

A golden double eagle will be given to the person who sends in the best ghost story to The Evening World. Personal experiences should form the foundation of the stories. They should be addressed "To the thoat Edicor," should be written on only one side of the paper, and should in no case contain over 200 reords. The name and address of the writer is required, but will not be published if a request to that effect accompanies the letter.

said in a sepulchral tone, "Be careful of Betty," Betty."

This was the name of a sprightly little widow I was paying court to, and caused me to huntup her antecedents, and I discovered the fact that she had buried five husbands, who died quite suddenly and mysteriously.

I caused the exhomation of their bodies, and in each of their brains was found an ounce of lead which was put in their cars in a molten state while asleep by the hand of "Betty," for which little act of attention she was hanged.

of the place looked me over for a moment, he turned, and from a small cabinet drew a small parcel wrapped in parchment and tied with colored silken threads. Removing the coverings, he exposed to my astonished gaze a human foot, which was preserved by some art so that it was as lifetike as though just severed from the ankle.

I bought it, although not wishing to do so. I could not resist.
I arrived in due time at home. On the night of my arrival I was awakened by a soft tread in my room. I opened my syes, when standing before me was a little Hindoo girl of about six or seven. She saw me ctart, and turned as if to flee, when she caught sight of the foot, which rested on the table. Grasping it she vanished. As she stepped from my sight I noticed she had but one live foot, the other had been severed below the ankle.

I have the parchment and cords still in my possession, but the foot is with its owner, no doubt.

It affords Mr. Ellis many opportunities, and that is all that stars seem to care for nowadays. Mr. Ellis's work was very effective, and he sang most acceptably. The little ladies, Silvan and Lowrie, made hits; so did Mr. Ellis's young sister, Miss Margaret Graham.

TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE.

Tony Pastor had a crowded house last night. He will undoubtedly have crowded houses all the week, for his programme is a most attractive one. Billy Birch's minutels headed it, and Billy Birch's minutels are hosts in themselves. Their jokes were really good, not at all be-whiskerel, while the musical features of the entertainment were extremely enloyable. There was also a specialty programme of interest. Dale, of musical renown, was there; so were the only Leon, who appeared in a comedicitie entitled "Snowdrop;" Miss Jeanie Vaimore with her songs, and a number of others. The entertainment ended with a burlesque called "Fin at School."
